

24. Education

Disabled people have a right to education.

Countries will make sure disabled people have the opportunity to go to mainstream schools and can carry on learning throughout their lives so that:

- Disabled people are able to develop their skills and abilities and take their place in the world.

- Disabled people are not excluded from (kept out of) any sort of education.

- Disabled people can go to good local schools, and don't have to pay for them, the same as everyone else.

- Disabled people have their needs met as far as possible.

- Disabled people get proper support to learn.

- People can learn Braille and other ways of communicating as needed.

- Teach people sign language and see it as a language of the deaf community.

- Deaf and blind children get the right education and support for them to learn.

- Make sure teachers have the right skills.

- Provide the right support for disabled people to continue their education as adults if they want to.
